

How to Support at Home

A Park Hill reader has a life-long love of reading and books, and it is our aim to ensure that children can read for pleasure at a high standard. Every child is taught a range of strategies to become a resilient and independent reader as well as being given opportunities to have their worlds expanded by the joy and wonder of reading through being immersed in rich reading environments.

The best way that you can support your child at home is to help foster a “love for reading” and ensure that reading is part of your daily routine, both listening to your child and reading to them is incredibly important.

Home Reading

Your child will bring home a reading sheet or book, this will be carefully linked to their reading level.

Children will be able to access this independently.

We would encourage children to revisit these reading materials several times over the course of the week to build their accuracy, fluency, and then also using expression.

Reading for Pleasure

They will also bring home a “reading for pleasure” book from their classroom and the library. This is a book they are interested in and they have chosen. We would like this to be a book to be enjoyed, together at home. They might like to talk about the pictures, spot sounds or words. The children should hear you reading this book to foster a love for reading and develop their vocabulary.

Resources for Home

There are resources which you can buy online which may support your child.

These flash cards are a useful tool for home.

We would ask that other Phonics books at their current reading level as we carefully ensure that the phonics books sent home match their reading level. Children are regularly assessed to ensure the appropriate level of challenge for your child.
